My dear Conklin

I don't want to let you forget that lecture you were so kind to promise me for next volume. How are you? and how are Mrs. C. and the boy? Wheeler has had a close call with typhoid, and is scarcely out of danger yet, although we now hope for the best. Do find time to drop a line and let me know how near the lecture is.

My dose of family engrossment is getting larger, and I have to prepare winter quarters. We are all well as usual. With kind regards to all

Yours truly
C. O. Whitman
